COMPANY PANICKING!

Brothers, sisters and siblings,

Jill Vichi was not at the bargaining table. Her letter is an attempt to spin the company's LBFO. Instead of trying to revisit what our members overwhelmingly rejected, the executives should be focused on how to reach a resolution that is acceptable to our members. Miss Vichi can try to dress up their subpar proposal all she wants, but the facts are the facts. 80% of our members rejected their offer. They now need to convince 50% + 1 of our members that their next offer addresses our 3 core concerns. Job Security, Retirement Security, and Wage Security. The IAM has no interest in negotiating a contract through the media. The company would be wise to bring their concerns to the negotiating table. In the meantime, the shops remain idled. If Jill Vichi really wants to know how our members feel, she can visit our picket line and plead her case.
